Jesse James' Kentucky Double.

There is hardly a school boy in Kentucky who is not familiar with the history of the exploits of the James brothers who for years terrorized various sections of the United States by robbing mail trains, banks and citizens. Associated with them were the Younger brothers—Cole, Bob and Jim Younger—who were finally convicted and given long terms in the penitentiary at Stillwater, Minnesota.

But that Jesse James had a double who lives, moves and has his being in Allen county, and whose resemblance to the Missouri bandit was so striking that he was once convicted and sentenced to a prison term for a crime, committed by him is not so well known, but it is true nevertheless. The recent publication regarding the effort to be made to induce the Federal Government to make of the Mammoth Cave a National Park, recalled the story to an old timer, who recited it in the following language:

"The James boys were often in Logan county after the close of the Civil War and had a rendezvous on Red river, near the town of Adairville. Travel to Mammoth Cave was then entirely overland from Cave City, and so heavy was the traffic and constant the visitors that Mr. McCoy, proprietor of the Mammoth Cave stage, made an immense fortune out of the traffic. One of his most trusted helpers and lieutenants was P. W. Depp, who for the past dozen years has been chief engineer of the Kentucky Branch penitentiary at Eddyville. On the occasion Mr. Depp turned over to his chief $1,600 as the result of one day's travel to and from the cave. Some years ago Mr. Depp completed a perfect facsimile of the old stage coach which figures in the famous robbery. It was a miniature coach, and was placed on exhibition at the World's Fair at St. Louis.

"The bandits evidently learned of the rich pickings to be secured by robbing the Mammoth Cave stage and planned a raid. On the morning of the robbery the stage left Cave City with only four passengers, Judge Roundtree and daughter, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., and two Southerners—one from Tennessee and the other a citizen of Alabama. Considerable booty was taken from the victims, among other valuables a gold watch belonging to Judge Roundtree and a diamond ring belonging to his daughter.

"The robbers made good their escape and for several days no arrests were made. George Hunt, then a celebrated local detective at Bardstown, arrested a man whose name was Thomas Hunt and whose birthplace has been credited to Simpson county, on a charge of being implicated in the robbery. Hunt was carried to Glasgow, as the stage crossed the Barren county line, and lodged in jail. Considerable trouble was experienced in getting the victims of the robbery to Glasgow to testify, as the Kentucky law at that time made provisions for the payment of mileage for witnesses from a distance.

"The two Southerners had already lost heavily by the robbery and declined to return to Kentucky at their own expense to testify against the accused. The Kentucky Legislature assembled while Hunt was in jail awaiting trial, and the law now on the statute books allowing mileage to witnesses is directly traceable to the robbery of the Mammoth Cave stage. At last all four of the witnesses appeared in court, and Hunt was placed on trial. Three of the witnesses positively identified the prisoner as the man who acted as spokesman for the robbers, but Judge Roundtree was not so positive. He said: If the prisoner is the man who acted as spokesman for the bandits then my faith in my own recollection is very much shaken, though he strongly resembles the man."

"Hunt refused absolutely to make any move to clear himself of the charge beyond denying any knowledge of the robbery.

"The case was given to the jury and a verdict was soon reached giving Hunt a term in the Frankfort penitentiary. Before he was transferred, however, Bob Ford shot and killed Jesse James in Kansas City, Mo., and in the vest pocket of the dead bandit was found the watch which was taken from Judge Roundtree on the morning of the robbery. A picture of Jesse James was printed in the Courier-Journal and the Mt. Sterling jurist, who never believed Hunt guilty, went to the capitol, where Governor Preston H. Leslie issued a pardon for him.

"The resemblance of the men Hunt and James was so striking and perfect that a photograph of each when closely compared would readily be taken for two pictures of the same man. A more striking illustration of mistaken identity was perhaps never chronicled in a court of justice, and only for the treachery of Bob Ford, Hunt would have worn the garb of a convict for a crime with which he had no connection."—Hartford, Ky., Republican.

Is There a Santa Claus?

Once a little girl wrote this letter to the Editor of the New York Sun:

Dear Editor: I am eight years old. Some of my friends says that there is no Santa Claus. Papa says: "If you see it in the Sun it's so." Please tell me the truth. Is there a Santa Claus? Virginia O. Hanlon.

Virginia: Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They will not believe unless they see.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exists, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas, how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

You might get your papa to hire men to watch all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down what would that prove? Nobody sees, Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men ever see. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders that are unseen or unseeable in this world. You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest that ever lived could ever tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love and romance can push aside that curtain and view the picture the supernatural beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing so real as abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God, he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia—nay, ten times ten thousand years from now—he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Danish Proverb.
He bears misery best who hides it most.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs. It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic trouble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wheeler's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 325 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family. Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address in a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well. Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

All the talking we can do in favor of FOX RIDGE will not convince you of its superior quality half so rapidly as a sample load.

MR. GOSLINGTON'S ADVENTURE

He Offers a Seat to a Lady in an Elevated Car—Unexpected Outcome.

This," said Mr. Goslington, "I confess is rather puzzling to me, but I am inclined to think that I get left in it.

"The elevated car in which I rode home late yesterday afternoon was as usual at that hour crowded, and so as usual I hung on by a strap.
But a few stations along the man in front of whom I had been standing got up and went out, leaving a vacant seat, which of course I might have taken but which I did not take,
for a step or two further back in the car there was standing, holding on
by a strap, a young woman talking with a young man who was standing near her, holding on by the next strap.

"What I did was to indicate to this young woman that there was a seat
for her, at which she turned and stepped across the car, as I supposed,
to occupy the seat that I had thus left for her. But just what she did was this:

"Sitting down on one side of this seat, she edged along a little further on that side, thus making her next neighbor there, a woman, move along a little, and thus providing half the seat vacant, and now she invited the young man with whom she had been talking to sit down beside her, which he did, all this leaving me to stand
there, completely ignored, in front of them.

"Sitting down as she did she dis-commoded the person, the woman sitting next to her, and crowding in to sit beside her, as he had to do,
the young man with her discommoded
the person sitting next to him. Thus this lady would appear to have proceeded when her opportunity came with entire disregard of everybody but herself, seeking with utter selfishness solely her own comfort and pleasure, or so we might have thought, if it were possible to think ill of any woman, which I do not; but while the situation was a little puzzling, it certainly did seem as if she had sort of made a gump
of me, don't you think?"—New York Sun.

The Aztec Calendar.

The Aztecs of Mexico had a calendar of their own and one copy is engraved in stone and now preserved
in the National Museum of Mexico.
Fifty-two years constituted a cycle
with the Aztecs. Each year had 365 days. There were 18 months of 20 days each and five additional days
that were considered very unlucky,
and were devoted to human sacrifice.
The month was divided into four weeks of five days each. The days were such names as "Rain," "Monkey" and "Small Bird," and each day of the month had a name. Whole phrases were used for the names of some months.

Much Power from Niagara.

Power generated at Niagara Falls
is to be distributed all over Canada.
Bids have been asked on 10,000 tons of structural steel for the Canadian government. The steel is to be used for towers which will support
the cables used in transporting the current. Already power generated at Niagara is being sent to a distance of more than 12 miles, and it is the intention of the Canadian government to increase this distance, says
the Scientific American. Towns in every direction about Niagara will be supplied.

Woman's Suspicious Reticence.

Are women beginning to talk less
in the hope of thus better pleasing men? If so, while commending the motive, we would unhesitatingly question the method. The mere music of their voices as contrasted with the raucous male note easily counterbalances any possible disparity in the ideas expressed. Upon all grounds we cry out for loosening of the delicate tongues now so strangely and so suspiciously stilled.

Even to China Land.

The equal-rights wave has reached the shores of China, and it is reported that a number of wives in Canton have left their husbands, saying that they will no longer be subject to them. The wives have had the worst of it, however, as the law gives power to imprison them, and they have had to suffer the consequences of their rash resolves.

Work of Zambesi Missions.

A pamphlet recently issued by Andrew Murray gives a brief survey of missions south of the Zambesi.
There are 31 different missionary organizations at work, ministering to over 10,000,000 people. The student volunteer movement in South Africa has put 84 young missionaries
in the field since 1896.

she exclaimed:

THAT RECORD JUMP BY WASHINGTON

Alleged Origin of Thackeray's Story of the 22 Foot Leap.

Three college athletes have had an ideal shattered by reading a paragraph in a speech that Sir G. Trevelyan made in London before the Publishers Circle at a recent dinner.
These men, in addition to being athletes, are devoted to Thackeray and
"The Virginians."

There is a reference in that book
to the prowess of George Washington as an athlete, particularly as a broad jumper. This is to the effect that Washington was able to jump 22 feet, which, considering that it was away back in the eighteenth century, was some leap. Although the best American record now is 24 feet 7 1/4 inches, it has not been standing so long, and in the early days of American athletics 22 feet was a remarkable performance in the broad jump.

These three used to pride themselves on knowing about that performance credited to Washington, and they pointed out how in 1876
and for three years following the American championship was won by leaps of less than 20 feet, and that from 1880 to 1885 inclusive the champion did not do 22 feet, although close to it on several occasions.

So they used always to tell folks who asked about great broad jumpers that Washington held the American record from 1752 to 1885. What shattered all this was the following from the Trevelyan speech:

"I was present at a dinner where Thackeray discoursed to a delightful audience of young people about 'The Virginians,' which he was then writing and which seemed to fill his mind
to the exclusion of everything else.
Among other matters he asked us,
all around the table, what was the widest jump any of us had ever known, and when we agreed upon twenty-one feet, he said: 'Then I must make George Washington jump
one foot more.'"

A Little Devil in the Heart.

An insane devil lurks in the heart of even the most sainted woman. It is the little devil that makes a young wife ask her devoted husband which of the two he would save if
she and her mother were drowning, writes William J. Locke in his story
"Simple Septimus," in the American Magazine. It is the same little devil that is responsible for infinite mendacity on the part of men. "Have you said that to another woman?"
No; of course he hadn't, and the wretch is instantly perjured. "My immortal soul," says the good fellow, instantaneously converted into an atrocious liar; and the little devil
comes with satisfaction and curls
himself up snugly to sleep.

Uses of Irish Peat.

Consul Henry S. Culver, of Cork,
writes that the peat beds of Ireland
may yet become a valuable asset in the country's industrial development
other than for fuel if, as is now claimed upon the authority of an Austrian experimenter, the fibres of the remains of the reeds and grasses
of which peat is composed can be utilized not only for paper-making and carpets, but for weaving the finest fabrics as well. The claim is put forth that the fibre is elastic and durable, and, being a non-conductor of heat, the cloth manufactured from it is as tough as linen and as warm as woolen.

India-Gestion.

Here is a story the bishop of London told John Morley the other day, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. They were holding an "exam." in an East-end school, and the teacher was explaining the chief products of the Indian empire. One child recited a list of cosmestibles. "Please, miss,
India produces curries and pepper
and citron and chillies and 'chutney and—and—" "Yes, yes, and what comes after that?" "Please, miss,
I don't remember." "Yes, but think.
What is India so famous for?"
"Please, 'm, India-gestion."

Hens Hatch Fish.

Chinamen have a way of tricking hens, so that they assist in the hatching of fish. Fish eggs are carefully placed in an egg shell, which is then sealed and put under an unsuspecting hen. In a few days the spawn is warmed into life and the contents of the shell are then cast into a shallow pool, where the sunshine completes the work.

Demand for Artificial Flowers.

Makers of artificial flowers in New York city are receiving an unusual number of orders from all parts of the country for the fall and winter trade. Most of the supply for the nation comes from New York, where more money is spent for the manufacture of imitation flowers than in any other city in the world.

Picking Out a Job.

"Work," observed the reflective deadbeat—"work is all right if you can get the sort to suit your individual needs. I, for instance, wouldn't object to calling out the stations on an Atlantic liner."

Spread Happiness.

Is not the first duty of those who are happy to tell of their gladness to others? All men can learn to be happy; and the teaching of it is easy.

Italian Proverb.

Little dogs start the hare, but great ones catch it.

"BUNK" OR "BUNC."

The Former the Northern, the Latter
the Southern Spelling.

"It never occurred to me that there could be any two ways of spelling the word 'bunk,'" said the scholarly appearing person who was studying the sporting section of the newspaper. "But I happened to pick up a Memphis newspaper the other day, and as a head to a speech made by Commissioner Loomis in Tokio
recently I read: 'Loomis Hands
Out the Bunc.'"

"Now, without endeavoring to go into the merits of the case so put I want to say only that the headline meant that Mr. Loomis was accused of softsoaping the Japanese he addressed. The only other authority for the spelling of the word comes from the sporting cartoonists, whose work I study carefully. They are unanimous in spelling it 'bunk.'"

"It appears to me that the Southern version is based on a belief that the word is a diminutive of 'buncombe.' The Northern spelling may be due to the belief that a person who may be bunked is a person of sleepy or dopy nature, who might as well be lying in a bunk, wrapped in slumber. Therefore when a person is bunked he is rendered sleepy.
That is merely conjecture."

The Dust of the Earth.

Expecting a visit from the superintendent of an adjacent Sunday school one Sunday afternoon, one enterprising teacher, anticipating the line of questions which would be asked of the scholars, selected a boy
from her class to answer each question. As she had figured it out, the visitor would first ask the pupils the question, "Who made you?" and the pupil was, of course, to answer
"God." The next question was to be "Of what?" to which the answer was to be "Of the dust of the earth."
Unfortunately between the time Sunday school was called to order and the visiting superintendent had taken the floor, the first pupil was taken sick and obliged to go home. The teacher did not have the opportunity to readjust her force, and when the first question was asked, the second boy thought it a good opportunity for him to get his answer and get it off his mind; so to the question,
"Who made you?" he answered, "Of
the dust of the earth."
"Oh, no," said the visitor. "God made you."
"No, sir; He did not," said the youngster. "The little boy that God made has gone home sick, and I am the dust of the earth."—Judge.

Famous Epicures.

In the ceiling of the dining room
in Nero's "golden house," on the Palatine hill, were compartments inlaid with ivory which revolved, showing perfumes and flowers on the guests. Flowers were presented to the guests by slaves. They were crowned with wreaths. Usually after one course the tables were removed and others placed before the guests.
Throughout the meal drinking continued until the banqueters fell under the table stupefied. In those days men lived to eat. Great generals spent fortunes accumulated in years of warfare in gratifying their appetites. Lucullus on one dinner with Cicero and Pompey spent 50,000 drachmas, or $7,000. Pithy-lus, who was famed for the delicacy and originality of his dinners, wrapped his tongue in linen when not using it. That he might better appreciate flavors of the vands he had it cleaned with fish skin before dining.

Time, to the Hundredth of a Second.
Of the many new devices that modern inventions has recently given to the world, perhaps there is no more ingenious contrivance than the electrical chronometer, the product of a Parisian brain, by means of which an automobile race can be timed even to the one-hundredth of a second.

One of these instruments is placed at the starting-point of the race and another at the finish, the two being connected by a charged wire. When the start has been made a current of electricity is immediately sent through the line, which deflects a needle, making a dot upon a paper on a revolving drum. At the finish another dot is made upon the paper;
the exact time may then be discovered by means of the scale which connects these markings.

Memory of Animals.

"The elephant's memory is proverbial," said F. Martin Duncan, F.
Z. S., at the New Gallery Photographic Exhibition, "but that of other beasts of the jungle is hardly less noteworthy."

Tigers in captivity always remember a kindness and recognize a friend
even after the lapse of months. Lions which have been in a zoological garden for years have also been known to show signs of abject fear when visited by native hunters, from the country where they had their early home.—London Daily Mail.

Surely the Limit.

A friend was once talking with a crazy woman, when a stingy man
passed by. "Do you see that man?"
said she, with cunning smile. "You could blow his soul through a humming-bird's bill, into a mosquito's eye, and the mosquito wouldn't blink."

Vices and Virtues.

Do not consider any vice as trivial,
and therefore practice it; do not consider any virtue as unimportant,
and therefore neglect it.—Bonar.

Farmer Thoughtful of Clerk.

An amusing incident occurred in a hotel a few nights ago. It appears that a farmer from South Jersey,
who was unusually ignorant of city ways, went to the hotel with his son. The father retired early, but the son went out to "see the town."

At 12:30 o'clock the farmer went down stairs and inquired of the night clerk if the boy had retired yet. He was told that he had not. The father went back to his room. An hour later he again appeared before
the clerk and said:

"Hain't Jack in yet?"

Again he was informed that the lad was out. The old man made several subsequent trips, and still his boy was among the missing. Finally at 3:30 o'clock the farmer trudged wearily down the stairs and asked again if his boy had returned.

"No, he's not in yet," replied the night clerk.

"Waal, I guess he won't come in,
then. Guess you needn't wait up any longer."

UNKIND.

Mr. Ruyter's Kramp (a poet)—When I write far into the night I find great difficulty in getting to sleep.
Miss Cutting Hintz—Why don't you get up and read what you've written?

Not That Kind of a Man.

At a banquet of the Farmers'
Union at Shawnee, Okla., a satirical speech by Irwin S. Mason, of the Salisaw stock farm, was well received.

"Enough, then,"—so Mr. Mason ended—"enough of this lying talk of the farmer's meanness and hardness and narrowness—this talk that makes the farmer out to be the kind of a man who'd complain if his wife eloped in the spring with the hired man, that he wouldn't have cared so much if she had only eloped in the fall instead, so that he'd have been spared the expense of wintering
her."

The New Primer.

See the young man with the happy look? He presented a pretty girl with a pound box of candy, and now he is IT.

How long will he be IT with the pretty girl?

Until an other young man comes a-long and presents her with a two-pound box.

The Price.

Client—This bill of yours is exorbitant. There are several items in it that I don't understand at all.
Lawyer—I am perfectly willing to explain it, but the explanation will cost you $100.

After being taken in to see his new baby sister, Henry, aged four, was very non-committal. A little later his mother sent for him and said:

"Henry, what do you think of our new baby?"

"Why, mother," he replied very seriously, "she's all brown and wrinkled. I'll bet you got stuck with an old one."

Pendleton—What are the two greatest wishes of a medical student?

Kefer—Give it up. What are they?
Pendleton—To put "Dr." before his own name and "Dr." after the names of other people.

"In the game of life," observed
the literary editor, "it is always—"
"I wish you wouldn't call life a game," interrupted the information editor.

"Why not?"
"Because it introduces the idea of chance. In the great scheme of creation—"

"I wish you wouldn't speak of creation as a scheme," irritably interposed the literary editor. "That introduces the idea that creation is a frame-up."

"Some men are so queer."

"And you are going to tell me of one particularly queer one?"

"Yes, it's Mr. Barberton. His wife used to beg him for nickles and dimes, and now he's cheerfully paying her a hundred a week for alimony."

"Say, dad, why did mother join the Drowning club? She isn't interested in poetry, is she?"

"Nope, but the club meets on Fridays, and she hasn't anything else to do on Fridays."

"But will your father give his consent?"

"Don't worry about that. Father is not going to waste time opposing a summer engagement."

Milly—Is this picture like your father?

Tilly—Of course not, sill! It is like father when he has his picture taken.—Puck.

Message Bound on Goose's Neck.

Fred Walton, a hunter of Granite City, Mo., killed a wild goose recently and message telling of boundless wealth, sickness and privation, of abandoned hope, was found bound to its neck. The message read:

"July 8, 1910, 120 miles due north of White Horse Rapids, on Pine Creek, I have been sick since June 15, and I feel certain I am going to die. My right arm is broken above the elbow, due to falling from the side of the mountain.

"I can hardly walk, and, although there is flour in my cabin, I have no way of cooking it, as my condition is such that I cannot do the work. Back of my cabin, two hundred yards up the gulch, where I have dug, there is a body of almost solid gold.

"It will never do me any good. Winter will be here in a few weeks, and if I am not found before then I will die from freezing to death.

"There is absolutely no hope for me.

"George Powers."

Will Pool 1911 Crops.

Burley tobacco growers of Kentucky, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri, in conference at Lexington adopted an agreement to pool their 1911 crops. Mass conventions will be called in each of the states for December 30 to elect delegates to a general meeting on January 5, when officers will be elected and a general organization effected.

More than one hundred thousand growers producing in excess of three hundred million pounds of tobacco annually, are affected by the new organization, its promoters assert, inasmuch as the agreement adopted provides that no tobacco shall be raised in 1912.

One of the provisions of the new organization will limit the salary of any officer to $5,000 a year. Delegates to the meeting (declared that one of the potent reasons for the collapse of the Burley Tobacco Society, which failed to engineer a pool of the 1910 crop, was the salary of $25,000 paid to its president, Clarence LeBus.

Eating Further Back.

The recent drop in the price of pork has enabled many of us to do as the old lady of whom we once heard says an exchange. Henry was a man of all jobs around the town where he lived. He was especially in demand about springtime when the women wanted their yards cleaned up and flower beds made and frequently accepted pay in the shape of a meal or some little gift from the family larder. After a good many years' trial he succeeded in getting a pension, together with considerable back pay. He immediately changed his method of living and abandoned everything that looked like work. One day a lady sent him word by her husband that she had a few little jobs, and if he would come and do them for her she would give him a nice jawl. Scorning the offer Henry replied: "Thank ye, boss; but you go and tell Miss Salie I see eatin' a little fuder back on de hog now."

Less Danger When Phones are Used.

Telephones for train dispatching on the Knoxville division of the Louisville & Nashville railroad have now been in service for more than two months, and officials say that they are even more successful than hoped for, says the Knoxville Journal and Tribune.

This is the first railroad that has ever displaced the old telegraph system with telephones in Tennessee, and probably in the Southeast, but already other roads whose officials have seen this division's lines in service, are contemplating inaugurating the system.

The advantage of using telephones in train dispatching are numerous. There is said to be much less danger of orders being misunderstood when spoken than when sent by code. It is also possible for a man to become a dispatcher without having to study for years on the telegraph code, and this in itself is becoming a great item for railroad officials to worry about, for it is said to be almost impossible for the railways to find as many competent dispatchers as are needed. Another advantage is that at small side stations, where no night dispatchers are kept a train crew can forward or receive messages, should there be something wrong with their train, and the danger of wrecks in this way be lessened.

During the past six months a great many improvements other than the telephone dispatching system have been made on the Knoxville division of the Louisville and Nashville railway, and it is now one of the most modern divisions of railroad in the south. All switch and signal lights have been changed and colors are now being used for signals which are less liable to be mistaken by train crews. A number of new engines have also been placed in service on the division, while numerous other minor improvements have been made.

A HOLE IN HIS COFFIN.

Through It Col. Butler's Triumphant Pigtail Should Protrude.

Thomas Butler, a Colonel in the army of the United States early in the nineteenth century, died in New Orleans in 1805 in the midst of his celebrated controversy with Gen. Wilkinson regarding the wearing of his queue.

Col. Butler insisted on wearing his hair in the old fashioned style in disobedience to Wilkinson's orders. According to Pierce Butler in his recently published biography of Judah P. Benjamin, while the dispute was still raging Butler died and left directions that a hole should be bored in the head of his coffin and that he should be borne to the grave with his triumphant pigtail protruding in defiance. The family tradition is that these directions were carried out.

Only the Truth.

A virtue carried to excess may become ridiculous. To such action one may well preach, "Be temperate in all things," even in virtue! Amelia Ople, the English authoress, was not content with any half measures, as is shown in a letter from her, quoted in "Quaker Pictures," by Wilfred Whittier. Mrs. Ople's course of conduct is to be respected as proceeding from her conscientious nature, but fiction-readers may congratulate themselves that her opinions are not universal.

Before she became a Quaker she wrote fiction. After her conversion she was asked to contribute a story to a magazine. Her answer to the editor ran as follows:

"Thou knowest, or ought to know, that since I became a Friend I am not free to what is called to make a story. I will write a fact for thy perusal, or any little matter of history or truth, or a poem if thou wishest, but I must not lie and say such and such a thing took place when it did not.

"Dost thou understand?"

The Ozark Mountains.

The Ozark mountains form a plateau region, from 1,200 to 1,800 feet above the sea level, extending with gradual upliftings from the southern part of Illinois into Missouri, then, sloping down, enters Arkansas and Indiana Territory, and extends into Kansas. The highest point is Pilot Knob, in Iron county, Mo. The hills are in separate peaks or knobs, and not continuous ridges. The irregularities which show mountain making processes as existing are not visible here.

The Ozark mountains, or Ozark Plateau, belong with the oldest mountain regions of the world, and denudation is slowly but surely removing the once lofty mountains. The plateau belongs to the Tertiary period, but Pilot Knob, and vicinity belong to the Palaeozoic age. North of the Ozark slope and south of the Mississippi river is an old flood plain. On the southern slope are large forests.

Remedy for Choking.

"Raising the left arm as high as you can will relieve choking much more rapidly than the act of thumping one's back," said a physician. "and it is well that every one should know it, for often a person gets choked while eating where there is no one near to thump him. Very frequently at meals and when they are at play, children get choked while eating, and the customary manner of relieving them is to slap them sharply on the back. The effect of this is to set the obstruction free. The same thing can be brought about by raising the left hand of the child as high as possible, and the relief comes much more quickly. In happenings of this kind there should be no alarm, for if the child sees that older persons or parents get excited the effect is bad. The best thing is to tell the child to raise its left arm, and immediately the difficulty passes away."

A Dead Bird.

Samuel Butler, the witty but eccentric author of "Erewhon"—which means "Nowhere"—and of many other remarkable and suggestive books, is now more read than during his lifetime. He died in 1902. In one of his note-books he tells this incident, which must have amused the great Charles Darwin.

Frank Darwin told me his father was once standing near the hippopotamus cage when a little boy and girl, aged four and five, came up. The hippopotamus shut his eyes for a minute.

"That bird's dead," said the little girl. "Come along."

Early Railroad Station.

The oldest structure in the world originally built for a railroad station is the now disused L. & N. depot in Lexington, Ky. It was begun in 1833. From the northwest corner of this building the first passenger railway car west of the Alleghenies started on its daily run to Frankfort. It has been used for almost three-quarters of a century and stands as a landmark to remind the present generation of the old order of things in Lexington and central Kentucky.

Will Find Cure for Leprosy.

REASONS OF THE DRUGGIST.

For Not Having in Stock the Thing
Called For by the Customer.

Druggists are unaccountable folk surely. The other day a man was looking for a certain patented article and tried five drug stores in turn in the same neighborhood before he was successful. Naturally in the stores where he failed, the offer of something just as good was made, but that wasn't the thing that hit him hardest.

In the second store the druggist said, "I did have that stuff in stock, but I never had any call for it. The only people who ever asked for it were the agents of the company, and they were around here all the time to see if we had it in stock. So I gave it up."

In the next store, a block away, the druggist said: "Yes, I did keep that once, but when I ran out of the first supply I never could get the company to send any more. I was looking out for the wagon all the time, but for three weeks at a time they never sent it up here, so I got tired of waiting. Now I don't keep it."

You can tie them, but you can't beat them.

Blushing a Sign of Sense.

Sir Arthur Mitchell, K. C. B., of Edinburgh, who knows much that is strange about dreams, laughter and other commonplace human characteristics, has just advanced the interesting theory that blushing is an achievement of which every one who can blush should be proud.

He says it requires brains to blush. Idiots cannot blush, neither can animals. Sir Arthur calls attention to the fact that tiny infants do not blush, although they learn to at an early age, just as soon, in fact, as the brain begins to exercise its functions. In blushing, he says, the mind always must be affected. It is always and only a bodily expression of mental state. It is a natural thing for a blusher to say that he had tried not to blush. No individual blushes of his own free will. The blush arises without call instantaneously and vanishes almost as quickly. Neither for its coming nor its going is there any exercise of volition. It is controlled, Sir Arthur says, solely by the brain, and is a positive sign that there is an active brain there.

The Absent Mindedness of Genius.

The absent mindedness of great thinkers is a well known phenomenon. When Morse had completed his wonderful telegraphic system he confessed to a difficulty which appeared to him almost insurmountable. "As long as poles can be used," he said to a friend one day, "it is easy. But what must be done when we come to a bridge? We cannot use poles there, and the wire would break of its own weight without some support." "Well," replied the friend, "why not fix the wires to the bridge?" Morse looked at him thoughtfully for a moment, and then exclaimed, "I never thought of that. It's the very thing." This instance of mental concentration on one leading idea to the exclusion of all others is almost as remarkable as that told of Sir Isaac Newton, who cut a hole in his study door to allow his favorite cat to come and go freely, and then cut a smaller one for the use of her kitten.—Dundee Advertiser.

Evolution of Marriage.

About the fact that polyandry, or the marriage of one woman to several men, was once a widely established usage there is no room for doubt. Caesar found it in Britain, and Tacitus is authority for the statement that it was practiced among the Germans of the early times. It is impossible to be exact about the chronological order of the various forms of marriage. In all probability the primitive state of man was one in which marriage did not exist, except in its plural character, when all the men and women in the community were regarded as equally married to one another. Then probably came polyandry, followed by polygamy, which was finally replaced by the present form—a system which may well be called "recent" in comparison with the length of time that human society has existed.

Not By Spirits Alone.

A red nose is by no means a sign of drunkenness, and is as common among teetotalers as tipplers. Indigestion is responsible almost more than anything else for red noses, while excessive tea drinking is apt to play havoc with the complexion in general and with the nose in particular. Sometimes the congested nose is a sign of some serious disorder of the heart, or it may point to a sluggish circulation. The habit of inhaling cigarette smoke and puffing it through the nostrils may contribute to the external wealth of color.

A Golfing Hint.

"Now, what shall I do?" inquired the beginner, having run through the gamut of his clubs. "Try kicking it," advised his caddy, who had been an interested spectator of the orgy.

Dangerous Propelling Power.

The use of alcohol for propelling power in automobiles is being discussed. In some cases of speed mania the suspicion is that there has been an overuse of it.

Deeds Alone Count.

A good intention will no more make a truth than a fair mark will make a good shot.—Spurstone.

POSTAL BANKS

ONE PLACE IN EACH STATE AND TERRITORY DESIGNATED FOR ATTEMPT.

Board of Trustees Will Give It Thorough Test in 48 Second-Class Offices.

Washington, D. C., The board of trustees of the postal savings bank system has approved a list of forty-eight second-class postoffices at which the plan will be given its first trial. The list includes one office for each state and territory.

The list they formally approved was selected after careful investigation by the postal officials with a view to making the first test of the service as thorough as possible under the limited appropriation of $100,000 provided by congress, which includes all the expenses and equipment, including the engraving and printing forms certificates, bonds, clerical assistance, etc.

Owing to the smallness of this appropriation it has been impossible to establish postal savings banks during the first year in the large city postoffices of the country. Communities were chosen in which the conditions were exceptionally favorable for the development of a postal savings business, mostly industrial centers where wage earners will be especially benefited by the kind of banking facilities afforded.

A large patronage of the service is expected by the officials from foreign-born Americans in these cities who are now remitting considerable sums to their native countries, usually in the form of money orders. Many of the places selected, particularly those in the west, are not adequately provided with other saving institutions.

It is probable that the plans devised for the new postal savings system will be given at least a month's trial in the original forty-eight offices before others are added to the list, although it is expected that the number of offices will be largely increased before the end of the current fiscal year.

The offices designated follow:

Bessemer, Ala.; Globe, Ariz.; Stuttgart, Ark.; Oroville, Cal.; Leadville, Col.; Ansonia, Conn.; Dover, Del.; Key West Fla.; Brunswick, Ga.; Couer D'Alene, Idaho; Pekin, Ill.; Princeton, Ind.; Decorah, Iowa; Pittsburg, Kans.; Middlesboro, Ky.; New Iberia, La.; Rumford, Me.; Frostburg, Md.; Norwood, Mass.; Houghton, Mich.; Benidji, Minn.; Gulfport, Miss.; Carthage, Mo.; Anaconda, Mont.; Nebraska City, Neb.; Carson City, Nev.; Berlin, N. H.; Rutherford, N. J.; Raton, New Mexico; Cohoes, N. Y.; Salisbury, N. C.; Washington, N. D.; Ashtabula, O.; Canyon, Okla.; Klamath Falls, Oregon; Dubois, Pa.; Bristol, R. I.; Newberry, S. C.; Deadwood, S. D.; Johnson City, Tenn.; Port Arthur, Tex.; Provo, Utah; Montpelier, Vt.; Clifton Forge, Va.; Olympia, Wash.; Grafton, W. Va.; Manitowoc, Wis.; Laramie, Wyo.

THE PASSING OF THE HORSE.

The consumption of horse beef is increasing with great rapidity in Europe, and it is suggested that even if some genius should build an electrical storage battery so cheap, so convenient, and so efficient as to relieve the horse and the mule of their jobs as beasts of burden they would still be bred as cattle and swine are for their flesh as a foodstuff.

That the horse will no longer be required as a beast of burden ere this century is half fulfilled seems probable. Then the grain and hay fed him and the pasture on which he grazes will be at the disposal of other farm animals unless the appetite of man shall demand the flesh of the horse as food. Of course, the horses will be bred for racing or for the carriage and the saddle.

Edison announces that he has perfected a storage battery that will serve the purpose. It is confidently predicted that soon every plow and farm vehicle will be supplied with power, and that it will cheapen production enormously, enabling a single farmer to do more work in a day, plowing, cultivating, planting and hauling than a half score of men can now accomplish, though each were aided by a team of horses or mules. If that consummation shall be realized, we ought to hear much less complaint about the high cost of living than we hear now.—Washington Post.

"Your story is good," said the publisher to the author who had called to learn his fate, "but there is one thing about it that I can't understand."

"What's that?" queried the author. "You have the climax in the middle chapter instead of the last," said the publisher. "Why is that?"

"Oh," answered the author, "that is a little scheme of mine to keep women from knowing how the story is going to turn out by reading the last chapter first."

"I have just ordered such a sweet frock. It is cinnamon, and there is a hat to go with it, trimmed with cherries and biscuit shoes and stockings."

"Stripes me you ought to have ordered that at the grocer's."

"Yes sir," said the Brimstone man, "I argued with Ingersoll for four hours and made him admit that a man could be in hell."

And the Brimstone man didn't understand why the listeners laughed.

A Home-Coming

Although a murderer Hans Olsen was a commonplace individual. Had he had a wooden leg or an old mother the papers might have worked up some public interest, if not enthusiasm, in his behalf, but as it was the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter, and Hans, without the aid of counsel even, found himself sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, and was delighted. Seven years instead of twenty! For that was what he had expected.

"Your wife wishes to see you."

Hans Olsen was standing lost in thought when the policeman entered and announced Marie. Strangely enough, he had forgotten about her in his excitement, and now that he was reminded of her existence, all the pleasure of relief left him.

"Marie!"

It was all he could say and awkwardly and shyly shook hands with her.

"Seven years," she sobbed, "I am not to see you for seven long years—and we have been married only six months!"

"Yes, it does seem like a long parting dear, when you put it that way. A man need not change in seven years, unless he likes, but a woman—" she finished with a groan. "You must go away," he continued, "there is enough in the savings bank to keep you for a year. Go to some quiet country place. My people won't know you. Call yourself Mrs. Hansen. That will be sufficient. But after the first year—"

"I'll work. I can live on little, very little indeed."

"And if the little is not there?"

"It shall be—it must be," she cried. "Good-bye, Hans. I must go, but I'll wait for you and as I forgive now, so will I keep my heart for you. Come at any time, you will be welcome always."

They shook hands and separated. Hans Olsen went to Vridsløse, and Marie to Aarhus, and each thought this world a hell.

But time passes, even in jail, and in due course Olsen began to count the days to his release. He had served nearly six years, and though a little doubtful as to what allowance would be made for good behavior, he hoped to be free at the end of the sixth year.

It was characteristic of the man's frame of mind that he should resolve to call on his wife unexpectedly. He found her address, and fate having ordained it that he should be released from Vridsløse the money he had earned proved more than sufficient to pay the railroad fare. In the train he worked himself up to a high pitch of excitement. He pictured his wife, totally oblivious of his existence, enjoying the society of others.

"If she has been unfaithful," he hissed, "I'll kill her."

There was no response to his repeated taps on the cottage door, and he pushed it open somewhat impatiently, and found himself in a square room of comfortable, if modest, appearance. A fire was burning brightly, and it was evident that someone had just tended it. A small table was set prepared for tea, and Hans Olsen noticed with a queer sensation, that the occupant of the cottage was expecting a guest.

"She can't have known I was coming," he muttered, and the longer he regarded the cups and plates, the harder his thoughts became.

"But I'll kill her if there is another," he cried out aloud as he went outside to see if she was coming. He caught a glimpse of a woman's dress among the trees and rushed back into the house, waiting tremblingly behind the door for his wife.

She entered lightly enough, but the moment she caught sight of his passionate face she started back and screamed.

"Oh, so you are surprised," he cried, catching her by the wrists and peering into her face.

"Why, is it really you, Hans?" she exclaimed in relief; but his face hardened.

"Who is the other?" he growled. "You could not have been expecting me."

She guessed his suspicions, and all woman in her was roused, as with a wrench she freed herself.

"You—you think I have been unfaithful," she said in a low tone. "That's what you have been suspecting all these years, while I was working day and night to keep—"

"None of that," he commanded. "Who is the second cup for?"

"Perhaps you have an idea," she replied with flashing eyes.

"If you do not tell me I'll kill you," he cried, grasping her by the shoulder. With a little cry of pain she sprang away.

"You coward."

The reproach maddened him, and he seized her by the throat.

"Mamma, mamma!" A shrill voice preceded its owner into the room, but the moment the small boy entered he stood dumb with terror. Hans Olsen's hands fell to his side.

"That's the second person," Marie moaned, lifting her tear-stained face. "Your son—he will be a few weeks. Oh, what a home-coming."

The man stood helpless watching her dumbly.

Good Will Toward All Men

By ETHEL BARRINGTON

N sharp, bleak gusts the wind swept fitfully through Main street, shaking from their vantage points, on roof and porch, great pointed icicles that hung in glistening array, like crystal prisms on a chandelier.

In the road, thick snow had packed and hardened, while the air vibrated with the jingle of bells decorating alike sleighs and runner wagons. At its head, the thoroughfare widened, to split in four directions, and in one of the triangles thus formed rose the Brick Hotel. It was an exposed spot, one to be avoided in rough weather, affording as it did full scope to the wind to play mad pranks; even, at its wildest, to sweep unfortunate pedestrians before it, like dust before a giant's broom.

Yet on Christmas eve, Maris Favor, returning from the office where the rush of holiday work had detained her far beyond her usual hour, paused, wondering what attracted the crowd of her fellow townsmen. She crossed to the outer edge of the gathering in the roadway, and by a flaring torch, held by a companion of the man who was speaking, she saw a street preacher.

"Good-will towards all men," was the text he preached. "Good-will not alone towards those in our beloved and immediate circle; not alone towards such as we hold in careless tolerant regard, but good-will towards all, whether they have done us good or evil turns. For the advent of the Christ-child, brings with it a brooding spirit of peace to a sin-tossed world."

"Which among you," cried the preacher, his voice risen to accusing note, "which among you, were all secrets known, would not be found to cherish and foster the memory of some special wrong, suffered perhaps years ago, that you hold back, and except when you pray, 'Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.'"

In the second story of the hotel one of the windows had been raised, and Maris, feeling that curious sensation which is caused by an intent regard, glanced up to encounter the concentrated gaze of the mistress of the hostelry, who leaned a little distance between the parted shutters. Maris, with sullen color mounting to her face, returned the look; power to turn aside being negated by some strange force in the eyes that compelled hers.

She and the woman, who once had been as a mother to her only to slam the door of happiness in her face, continued to stare across the heads of the preacher and his listening audience.

The older woman leaned a little farther and, with imperative finger, beckoned the girl to enter the hotel. The action broke the spell and Maris, with a defiant negation of the head, turned to pursue her way.

"Maris—" The girl could not have told whether or not her name had been actually spoken, or was merely a silent cry, a part of the compelling influence she had experienced. Nevertheless her steps lagged and, though yielding had been far from her will, she presently turned about and entered the Brick Hotel.

The door was open, the sitting-room warm with fire and lamp, and Rachel Castle stood listening, her face turned towards the door.

"So the preacher man forced you to think of me after three years of silence?" The girl's voice quivered under the burden of mingled feelings conjured up by the meeting.

"He made the moment opportune," corrected the other. "I have thought of you always."

"Well, say your say, and let me go."

Mrs. Castle moved towards the fire, pushing forward a chair.

"You have grown hard—I should scarcely know you, if it were not for your eyes and hair. Come, sit here, Maris. I cannot stand very long, now."

Unwillingly Maris took the chair indicated, while Mrs. Castle seated herself opposite. In the searching glare of blazing logs, the girl could not fail to remark the change in the other, the figure had become wasted, the face pinched. Her heart stirred uncomfortably. Despite their quarrel Maris owed much to Rachel Castle—the charity of the Brick Hotel had saved her girlhood from the poor-house.

"You have been ill?" she asked.

"For a year; you did not hear?"

The girl shook her head, and her eyes wandered over the room noting the almost imperceptible changes that time had wrought, and welcoming the salient features that lived in her memory; the bookcase, the horse-hair sofa, the marble-topped table with its case of stuffed canaries, many of whom she had fed in life and, last of all, the man's photograph on the mantel, set in its heavy silver frame. She seemed to look long, but in reality after the first moment she could distinguish no single feature, for the hot blinding tears that she would not suffer to fall.

"Ben hasn't changed," said Rachel Castle, following her eyes, "only in manner—as you have done. He's grown hard, and a bit reckless."

The girl moved restlessly in her chair.

"I must be going."

"It's pleasant to have you, Maris." The woman ignored the suggestion. "We always did sit together on Christmas eve, if you remember—" Then, as Maris offered no comment, Mrs. Castle drifted into memories of small, intimate happenings of their past daily life, of festivities, and social merriment that marked such seasons as the present one.

"I used to fancy that life would be always the same—" she continued, her voice low with the restraint she put upon herself. "Maris—" her thin hand bridged the space between their chairs and softly touched the girl's knee. "You can't have lost all your sweetness. You ain't so hard as you would pretend to me?"

"Don't!" The girl rose abruptly, turning her back deliberately to the photograph in the silver frame. "When we parted I thought you hard, selfish unjust—and I kept my resentment alive, burning deep down in my heart—I wouldn't let it die, just as that preacher down stairs said. When there's a thing like that in your soul, the little shoots of tenderness of charity, that keep a woman's nature sweet, are nipped and starved. You are right—I am changed. But tonight, for the sake of what you did when I was a forlorn, motherless girl, I'd like to shake hands. Wait—" She thrust and clasped her hands behind her back as the elder woman rose, a tender longing, suffusing her pallid face, and continued in a strained and breathless sort of voice. "You thought because Ben was your son, you had a right to decide his life; you thought because you had befriended me, you could dictate my life, too. I see, now, that there was force in both arguments. At the time the hurt was too deep. I had been only the creature of your charity, where I imagined myself, all but in blood, a daughter."

"You were courageous—I watched you, always, though I never let you know."

"Courageous! What gave me courage to face the world after you had cast me from your home? It was the knowledge that it was not in your power to take Ben from me—I sent him away myself."

"He followed you, then?" Rachel Castle sank back into the armchair. She had not known.

"It's so long ago," the girl told her. "You need not mind."

"Why did you not take him?" the mother questioned curiously.

"Pride—wounded vanity—the fact that I must always be in your debt."

"My dear—you have wiped that out forever"—and with a yearning that would not be denied, the elder woman reached out her arms to the girl.

A shrill whistle caught the other's ear; the sound for which she waited. The express from New York must have deposited its home-coming passengers some minutes before and was again flying through the darkness to its destination.

"I wanted to be sure that you still cared," she whispered, her fingers hovering above the bowed head. "Change, you know, is the one thing we old folks have to learn to reckon with."

"How could I change!" Maris lifted her head in quick resentment, but what she beheld in the close bent face silenced her.

"True—I am the one who has changed. Maris, I acknowledge, now, that having brought you two together, I should have abided by the consequences. But I was ambitious for my boy—I wanted—but that is past. In separating you two, I have built a barrier between myself and my only son."

"Maris"—her voice was no more than a thread of sound—"I ask you to give him back to me."

There came a quick step on the stair, outside, and in the doorway stood Ben Castle, a little blinded with the sudden glare.

"Mother—" he said, and, leaving Maris where she crouched upon the rug, Rachel Castle moved swiftly towards him.

"Ben!" she cried. "It's like the old Christmas to have you home, and Ben"—clinging to his broad shoulders with both frail hands, as she kissed him again—"Ben, I want you to speak to—her."

Before she closed the door she saw her son drop into the chair where she had sat and, lifting the bowed figure of the girl, crush her hungrily against his heart.

"Ben hasn't changed," said Rachel Castle, following her eyes, "only in manner—as you have done. He's grown hard, and a bit reckless."

The girl moved restlessly in her chair.

"I must be going."

"It's pleasant to have you, Maris." The woman ignored the suggestion. "We always did sit together on Christmas eve, if you remember—" Then, as Maris offered no comment, Mrs. Castle drifted into memories of small, intimate happenings of their past daily life, of festivities, and social merriment that marked such seasons as the present one.

"I used to fancy that life would be always the same—" she continued, her voice low with the restraint she put upon herself. "Maris—" her thin hand bridged the space between their chairs and softly touched the girl's knee. "You can't have lost all your sweetness. You ain't so hard as you would pretend to me?"

"Don't!" The girl rose abruptly, turning her back deliberately to the photograph in the silver frame. "When we parted I thought you hard, selfish unjust—and I kept my resentment alive, burning deep down in my heart—I wouldn't let it die, just as that preacher down stairs said. When there's a thing like that in your soul, the little shoots of tenderness of charity, that keep a woman's nature sweet, are nipped and starved. You are right—I am changed. But tonight, for the sake of what you did when I was a forlorn, motherless girl, I'd like to shake hands. Wait—" She thrust and clasped her hands behind her back as the elder woman rose, a tender longing, suffusing her pallid face, and continued in a strained and breathless sort of voice. "You thought because Ben was your son, you had a right to decide his life; you thought because you had befriended me, you could dictate my life, too. I see, now, that there was force in both arguments. At the time the hurt was too deep. I had been only the creature of your charity, where I imagined myself, all but in blood, a daughter."

"You were courageous—I watched you, always, though I never let you know."

"Courageous! What gave me courage to face the world after you had cast me from your home? It was the knowledge that it was not in your power to take Ben from me—I sent him away myself."

"He followed you, then?" Rachel Castle sank back into the armchair. She had not known.

"It's so long ago," the girl told her. "You need not mind."

"Why did you not take him?" the mother questioned curiously.

Ages of Woman.

If any one had written a seven ages of woman's speech, surely most of the parts would have been played by Margaret Chanler Aldrich, who has been a prominent figure in municipal betterment movements and national causes for a good many years. Mrs. Aldrich has turned poet and is to issue shortly a volume of poems called "Sonnets for Choice." There are exactly fifty of these verse forms in the promised work and their subjects range from the varying aspects of nature in this part of the world at the different seasons to sonnets addressed to such men as Shelly, Agassiz and Pasteur, while the emotions also come within their scope.

Irony Lost Case for Lawyer.

In his early days at the bar the late Lord Bowen prosecuted a prisoner who had been caught in a house at night crawling downstairs with his boots off and carrying portable property. The evidence was so overwhelming that Bowen ventured to indulge in a little irony and remarked on the thoughtfulness of the prisoner in removing his shoes, thus disturbing nobody, and in selecting only solid silver articles from the plate basket, so that the family had enough forks and spoons left for breakfast. The jury was so impressed by these extenuating circumstances that it acquitted the prisoner. Bowen never employed irony again when addressing a jury.

Ventilation an Art in Chicago.

The fine art of ventilation in Chicago is still making long strides. Several large firms which occupy whole floors now have the big windows swing from left to right on the principle of passenger car ventilators. The position of the windows can thus be regulated according to the passage of the wind, and cleaning the panes is made easy. But the ordinary window washer can still do arctic wonders with the old-fashioned vertical sash in any office building.

MANY TAILORS DECEIVED.

More Than 1,000 Exclusive Samples Get Into the Wrong Hands.

A piece of cardboard covered with square samples of woollen cloths for men's and women's suitings might not seem to the average man a very valuable article, yet elaborate schemes to get hold of such sample cards are planned and sometimes carried through.

A couple arrived recently at the best of the Philadelphia hotels and set out to visit all the leading tailors. The man wanted a winter outfit of a comprehensive character, while the woman was just as interested in accumulating a winter wardrobe of the tailor made variety. Occupying large rooms in the hotel, there was no reason to believe that the two were anything other than they represented themselves. So when they gave the number of their suite in the hotel the samples were forthcoming.

After several days had passed without the expected orders the tailors began to send to the hotel for information. The answer returned was that the two had given up their rooms and left the day before. No samples were to be found.

The number of inquirers became so large that they were referred by the hotel clerk to police headquarters. More than 1,000 samples of cloth had been sent by the tailors to the couple. Investigation showed their purpose when in the Broad street station were found two wooden packages they had checked there, filled with sample cards from which the cloth had been torn away.

The couple had succeeded in acquiring possession of the best samples of the firms that deal in the high class exclusive patterns. Of course they will sell their patterns to the cheaper firms that endeavor to reproduce them.

Even a bolder effort to get the exclusive samples is reported from Chicago. There two men rented a store in which to open a tailoring business of a high priced character and sent to the manufacturers for their samples. The samples were sent, but no orders ever came.

Later inquiry from the manufacturers showed that the firm had got no further in its career than taking the store for a month. Its object was plain when some of the best designs were turned out by the cheap mills.

Origin of the "Black Hand."

There was a historical foundation for the name "black hand," according to Everybody's. Back inquisition days in Spain there was La Mano Nera, a secret society which fought the government and the church. It passed, and the secret societies of southern Italy were its heirs. Twenty years or more ago a false report was raised in Spain that La Mano Nera had been revived. The story lingered in the brain of a Herald reporter, and one fine day he attempted to rejuvenate waning interest in a puzzling Italian murder case by speculating as to the coming to life of the "black hand" among Latin immigrants in America. The other newspapers seized on the idea eagerly and kept it going.

McClintock Divorce Suit.

The Lexington Leader of Monday contained the following:

"Monday morning when Circuit Court met no decisions were rendered by Judge Parker, but the divorce suit of Mrs. Maggie Rogers McClintock vs. James D. McClintock was discussed at some length by the court, though no order was entered in the case.

"The suit is for a separation and was filed in the court some months ago, and after a thorough consideration of the case Judge Parker said he was sure that no ground for a divorce had been shown, but as to whether or not there was shown even a ground for separation would be decided later.

"Should a separation be granted, Rachel, the three-year-old daughter of the parties, will be given to the custody of each, the care being divided equally as to time. She will remain in the care of her mother until the final order in the case is made.

"No cause of separation is shown in the great mass of testimony taken unless it be that of 'incompatibility of temper,' and in all the evidence filed there is no reflection on the character of either of the parties to the suit.

"Judge Parker said that in his opinion a better solution of the case could be made by the parties themselves and their attorneys, and he requested that the counsel in the case take up the matter for consideration with that object in view.

"While a separation might be granted if it were shown that either would suffer any humiliation or disgrace from living with the other there is no such showing in this case, there being no suggestion of that event.

"I think this case can be adjusted and these people ought to live together. The child will be better off in a real home with her father and mother than in an artificial home that a court of chancery can create for her," Judge Parker said.

"The evidence in the case was discussed at some length and if the parties cannot agree then a judgment will be rendered, but Judge Parker indicated that he would very much prefer that the matter be adjusted without further consideration from the court, but in case a reconciliation cannot be effected a judgment will be rendered early in the coming year."

ITALIAN CHEAP LIVING.

Railroad Laborers Able to Get Along on Less than $10 a Month.

That Italian laborers save more money at the same wages than any other European immigrants is a statement made in a report of the department of commerce and labor. The reason is easily found, says the New York Sun.

A great majority of the unskilled laborers in this country are employed in railroad construction and similar work where there are no accommodations for boarding and lodging the men. The boarding camp thus becomes essential to the contracting company.

In the case of men of all nationalities except the Italians a fixed charge is made for the boarding and lodging of each man. The Italians, however, insist on buying and cooking their own food.

Investigation of the records of a contracting company employing many laborers of various nationalities in railroad construction showed that the actual cost to the company of groceries, provisions and payment for cooks, waiters, fuel, light, etc., at its boarding camps was 19 cents a meal, or $3.99 a week for each man. The men were charged $18 a month for board and lodging.

The Italians at the camps of the same company lived mostly on macaroni, sausage, cheese, sardines and bread being the staples and the others used very sparingly. The average monthly expense of each laborer was as follows: Twenty-five one and one-half pound loaves of bread at 8 cents, $2; thirty pounds of macaroni at 7 cents, $2.10; sausage, sardines and cheese, $1.50; lard, 90 cents.

Most of the Italians in addition to that amount spent an average of $3 a month for beer, cheap cigars and tobacco, which with the expense of $1 a month for shanty rent brought the total cost of living up to about $10 a month.

A Woman's Heroism.

History has presented few examples of greater heroism than that of Mrs. S. J. Rooke, the telephone operator of Folsom, N. M., who when warned by a resident of the hills to flee for her life from the flood speeding to engulf the valley, rejected the opportunity to save herself and employed the hour that intervened between the warning received and her own death by drowning in calling up subscribers by telephone and acquainting them of their danger. More than 40 families have already acknowledged their lives saved through the magnificent courage of one frail woman, whose lifeless body, with the telephone headpiece still adjusted to her ears, was found 12 miles down the canyon.

Spurious Superiority.

Dr. Johnson said of a certain Mr. Kendrick: "Sir, he is one of the men who have made themselves public without making themselves known." That is to say, all his fame rested on attributes he did not own, but possessed only as the jackdaw in the fable stuck the peacock's feathers in his tail.

He Could Not Quite Remember.

Voltaire's plaint, "The necessity of saying something, the perplexity of having nothing to say!" might have found an echo in an audience addressed for the third time in one service by an old gentleman famed for his readiness to speak. "I was thinking while sitting here of the words of the poet," said he. "I can't just remember the words, and the name of the poet has gone from me."—Youth's Companion.

Ends Winter's Troubles.

To many, winter is a season of trouble. The frost bitten toes and fingers, chapped hands and lips, chilblains, cold sores, red and rough skins, prove this. But such troubles fly before Bucklen's Arnica Salve. A trial convinces. Greatest healer of burns, boils, piles, cuts, sores, eczema and sprains. Only 25c at Oberdorfer's.

Saved From Awful Death.

How an appalling calamity in his family was prevented is told by A. D. McDonald of Fayetteville, N. C., R. F. D. No. 8. "My sister had consumption," he writes, "she was very thin and pale, had no appetite and seemed to grow weaker every day, as all remedies failed, till Dr. King's New Discovery was tried, and so completely cured her, that she has not been troubled with a cough since. Its the best medicine I ever saw or heard of." For coughs, colds, la-grippe, asthma, croup, hemorrhage, all bronchial trouble it has no equal. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer.

A Tree That Weeps.

During the driest months of the Rhodesian year—August, September and October, a tree called by the natives Mukololo, exudes moisture in large drops from its topmost leaves, and gives the traveler who happens to be standing in the immediate vicinity the impression that a shower of rain is falling. When the natives see one of these trees dripping, they say: "The Mukololo is weeping for rain." Even during the hottest day the tree weeps copiously.—Strand.

Crystal Gazing.

In Africa crystal gazing seems to be common. Mr. Lang cites a case from Madagascar where a woman is alleged to have seen a French vessel on its way thither and to have recognized its occupants weeks before the ship was in sight of land. The Africans of Fez used a vessel of water and at the present day a pool of ink is in use in Egypt.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"Eating food to keep it from spoiling," says the Philosopher of Folly, "is converting one's self into a domestic reduction plant."

Banks On Sure Thing Now.

"I'll never be without Dr. King's New Life Pills again," writes A. Schingeeck, 647 Elm street, Buffalo, N. Y. "They cured me of chronic constipation when all others failed." Unequaled for biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, headache, chills, malaria and debility. 25c at Oberdorfer's.

Have You Tried It?

There is a bottle of Cardui waiting for you at the drug store. Have you tried it? If not, we urge you to do so, before your troubles have obtained such a hold on you, that nothing will drive them out.

Even now, it may be nearly too late. But try it anyhow. If anything can help you, Cardui will. It has helped in thousands of cases, where other medicines had been tried in vain. Why should it not do the same for you?

Take CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

"My daughter, Octava, would have been in her grave today, had it not been for that fine medicine, Cardui," writes Mrs. Laura Lawrence, of Drennon Springs, Ky. "Nothing I tried helped my daughter, until she had taken Cardui. I had sent for the doctor, when I thought of your medicine and got a $1 bottle. When she had taken four doses she became all right. I often recommend Cardui to my friends."

Your druggist sells Cardui with full instructions for use on the bottle.

Importance of the Letter.

Letters are the very nerves and arteries of friendship—nay, they are the vital spirits and elixir of love, which, in the case of distance and long absence, would be in hazard to languish and quite molder away without them.

Really Kind.

Mother (telling the history of our first parents)—And Eve ate of the fruit, and she gave some to Adam.

Dolly—Oh, mamma! How kind of her!

A Hard One.

Wife—You promised that if I would marry you my every wish would be gratified.

Husband—Well, isn't it?

Wife—No; I wish I hadn't married you.

NO WORK THERE.

The Doctor—Your husband looks as though he were overworked.

Mrs. Wane—Impossible. He holds a political office.

It was in school. The children were studying the stationer's table:

Twenty-four sheets, one quire.

Twenty quires, one ream.

The teacher asked, "Who can tell what a stationer is?"

Two little boys raised their hands. "John?" said the teacher.

"A stationer is a man who keeps a station," said John, confidently.

"Frank, tell me what you think."

"I think a stationer is a hotelkeeper," he declared confidently.

"Why do you think so, Frank?" asked the teacher curiously.

"Because I don't know anyone else who would have twenty-four sheets."

Limpy Bill—I had to split up twice as much wood as usual afore th' old lady would gimme a hand-out.

Blindy Bob—What's th' cause of it, Limpy?

Limpy—Th' increased cost of livin', I s'pose.

Householder (to street musicians)—"No; I sha'n't give you anything. You play all out of tune."

Cornet (confidentially)—"Well, I'll tell you 'ow it is, sir. There's some of em as a grudge against others, and does it o' purpose."

Butler—"Lady Gray and the new cook are waiting below stairs, madam."

Mrs. Frost—"Show the cook up first, Jorkins. Lady Gray can wait, but the cook won't."—Life

Judge (to barber sentenced to death)—If you have a last request, the court will be glad to grant it.

Barber—I should like to shave the prosecuting attorney.

"There's a masked man at the back door."

"Horrors! Is he after my diamonds?"

"No, madame. He only wants to borrow a can of gasoline."

German Proverb.

By three things we learn men—love, play and wine.

All He Was Worth.

Once there was an Indian named Big Smoke, employed as a missionary to his fellow Smokes. A white man, encountering Big Smoke, asked him what he did for a living. "Umph!" said Big Smoke, "me preach."

"That so? What do you get for preaching?"

"Me get ten dollars a year."

"Well," said the white man, "that's damn poor pay."

"Umph!" said Big Smoke, "me damn poor preacher."

Just Had to Do It.

"See here," said the judge to the garrulous prisoner who was acting as his own attorney, "you'll have to cut out those interruptions. I won't allow you to waste the time of the court." "But, your honor," rejoined the prisoner, "what else can I do? I've got no lawyer to do it for me."

Enemy of Rattlesnake.

No resident of Arizona, New Mexico or Texas would kill a road-runner. It is firmly believed that the bird is the deadly enemy of that monster of the desert, the rattlesnake. The accepted tradition is that the road-runner and the rattlesnake are deadly enemies, and that the rattlesnake fears the road-runner beyond anything else.

How True!

"Homely women angle for men," says the Philosopher of Folly, "but a pretty girl depends on her curves."

The Test of Civilization.

The quality of the bread which a nation eats is the true index of the grade of civilization.—Baker's Weekly.

Wants to Help Some One.

For thirty years J. F. Boyer of Fertile, Mo., needed help and couldn't find it. That's why he wants to help someone now. Suffering so long himself he feels for all distress from backache, nervousness, loss of appetite, lassitude and kidney disorders. He shows that Electric Bitters work wonders for such troubles. "Five bottles," he writes, "wholly cured me and now I am well and hearty." It's also positively guaranteed for liver trouble, dyspepsia, blood disorders, female complaints and malaria. Try them. 50c at Oberdorfer's.

Something to Remember.

Bear this in mind, love letters are never burned until after you've married the girl, and sometimes not then. —Detroit Free Press.

An Alphabetical Shift.

"There is a strong egotistic tendency in modern literature." "Yes. Formerly, when a man wanted to be startlingly emphatic, he used a big 'D.' Now he uses a large 'I.'"

Sewed Man in Mule Skin.

Burt Brown, of Gun Log, Ga., had the unusual experience of being sewed up six hours in a mule's carcass. Brown and several companions were returning home by a country road, when, suffering from the effects of too much liquor, collapsed by the roadside near the carcass of a dead mule. The practical jokers, seeing Brown asleep, hastily stowed him away, stitching up the hide with strings. The sleeping man finally awoke and began yelling. Two men came up, and hearing shrieks cut the stitches and let Brown out, cold and badly frightened.

Has Teeth Made of Hickory.

In Hart county resides a man that claims the distinction of being the oldest mail carrier in the United States, and now he asks the Government to retire him on a pension. This man is Frank Forbis, who is ninety years of age, and has been carrying the mail from Munfordville to Cuo Run, a distance of fifteen miles, daily for half a century. During his life he has lost only three teeth and has worn false teeth made out of seasoned hickory. They are cut by him so as to fit about the other teeth. They last for several years and when they wear out he makes others. The aged carrier filed his application for a pension a few days ago.

TODD'S BODY RECOVERED

Young Man Drowned at Millersburg Tuesday Taken from Stream Early Next Day

WAS NATIVE OF MADISON

Remains Taken to Richmond for Burial Thursday - Happening in Millersburg

The body of Price Todd, aged 21 years who was drowned in Hinkston creek, Tuesday afternoon, about 5:30 o'clock, was recovered Wednesday morning at an early hour following an ineffective search which continued far in the night Tuesday.

Todd was residing with Mr. J. E. Mann and had been stripping tobacco for him in the barn of Peed & McClintock. Mann resided on the farm of A. T. Vimont and Todd, in company with Harry Mann, after the day's work was done, was returning home. It was much nearer to reach home by crossing the creek, they believing that the ice was yet firm. They attempted to cross back of the bend of the creek.

Todd was walking a little in advance of Mann and had gotten out about twenty feet from the shore when the ice broke with him. Mann called to him to hold on to the ice until he could procure a pole. Todd in his frantic efforts to extricate himself made several attempts to get out on the ice, each time it broke with him, dropping him back into the icy water.

Mann returned with the pole just as Todd went down the last time. His cap was still floating on the water. The alarm was soon given and in a little while a large searching party was on the scene. The ice was broken, the creek dragged, but as the night was cold with no light except lanterns, the search was ineffectual and was abandoned about nine o'clock.

The search was renewed Wednesday morning. Messrs. J. D. Bradley and O. M. Thomas went out in a boat, and tying four hooks on a long line began dragging. It was soon found that one of the hooks had taken hold of something. On drawing in the line it was ascertained that the body had been found and the hook had caught in the right trouser leg.

It was taken at once to the undertaking establishment of Mr. Joe W. Mock, where it was prepared for burial, and was taken to Richmond Thursday morning, leaving here on the 9:41 train, where it was buried Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Todd was a native of Madison county and has resided in and around Millersburg for the past two years. For a time he resided with his sister, Mrs. Arthur Higg, until the family moved to the country. For several months he has been in the employ of J. E. Mann.

Mrs. Boots has been in failing health since last April, with tuberculosis, but until within the last ten days she has been able to go about the house doing all of her indoor work. Tuesday she seemed to have contracted a deep cold which developed into pneumonia but her condition was not thought to be necessarily critical. About twenty minutes before she died she complained to her husband of feeling cold and numb, saying she could not see. A physician was hastily summoned but she expired before he arrived. Mrs. Boots before marriage was a Miss Martin, and her family resides in Bracken county near Augusta. She is survived by her husband and four small children, ranging in age from three to ten years. ## People to Freeze in Million Years.

Men will freeze to death on the equator millions of years hence, according to Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, who forsook the subject of germs in food in addressing the Secular League at Washington this week and discussed the question, "Is man to ultimately starve or freeze?"

Dr. Wiley said he believed the earth was slowly cooling, and that the people of the distant future must freeze, though he declared for "a million years at least" humanity would not suffer from lack of food or fuel in the frigid days that are yet to come, according to Dr. Wiley, the winds will serve as fuel.

"From my knowledge of the laws of electricity," he said, "and from practical experiments already being made I prophesy the currents of air which have been agents of destruction to man will yet be harnessed for his preservation."
